

DIRECTOR

The Australian Meat Processor Corporation (AMPC) is the national Research & Development Corporation (RDC) that represents the Red Meat Processing Industry in Australia. AMPC is responsible for the strategic investment of red meat processor levies in RD&E and Marketing programs directed at improving the sustainability and efficiency of the red meat processing industry.

The AMPC Board is responsible for developing the Corporation's policies, governing its operation and monitoring its performance.

The AMPC Board is committed to governance systems that enhance performance and ensure that AMPC is operating according to accountability provisions of the PIERD Act and in accordance with its Constitution and Statutory Funding Agreement with the Commonwealth Government.

AMPC Directors have experience in one or more of the following fields of expertise: corporate governance; meat processing plant management; livestock management and welfare; domestic and international market development and trade; research and development, technology, technology transfer, commercialisation and adoption; administration of research and development; and finance and business management.

AMPC is seeking candidates that have demonstrated expertise in the above areas to apply for the Special Qualifications Director positions to complement the Processor Director positions on the AMPC Board. Prospective candidates submitting an application will need to include their CV and a short statement addressing one or more skill areas listed above together with the "Nomination Form for Special Qualifications Director". Prospective candidates should be advised that there will be an interview process following receipt of nominations. Applications close on Friday, 11th October 2013.

Submissions should be made to the Australian Electoral Commission (AEC),
PO BOX 496, Haymarket NSW 1239.
