

PROJECTS OFFICER

The North Australian Pastoral Company (NAPCO) is seeking a Projects Officer to be based at its Brisbane office. This position is available due to internal promotion and will suit someone with a foundation of experience in a similar field looking for the next step in their career.

Founded in 1877, NAPCO is a leader in Australia's cattle industry with a herd of approximately 200,000 cattle. The Company operates 13 cattle stations across Queensland and the Northern Territory and the Wainui Feedlot on Queensland's Darling Downs.

As NAPCO's Projects Officer you will jointly report to the General Manager for Growing and Marketing, and the General Manager for Breeding and Genetics. Your extensive and diverse role will provide analytical, administrative and logistical support to the Senior Management team undertaking projects relating to legislative requirements, property and environmental planning and overall business efficiency and profitability. The position will include station visits and other travel requirements.

To be successful in this position you will have:

- An understanding of the extensive pastoral industry, the beef supply chain and key profit drivers
- An understanding of the principles of property and environmental planning in the pastoral industry
- Familiarity with key legislative and other requirements of the pastoral and feedlot industry
- Excellent written and verbal communication skills
- Strong computer literacy including familiarity with Microsoft suite products
- Analytical research and problem solving ability
- Tertiary qualifications in either Agricultural Science, Natural Resource Management, Environmental Science, Animal Production, Agricultural Commerce, or similar discipline; or equivalent experience.

To apply, please email your Resume and Cover Letter addressing your suitability for this position to info@napco.com.au.

Applications must be received by close of business Monday 9th February, 2015
