

Technical Sales Manager

- Pasture improvement with livestock & nutrition focus
- Seed industry
- Southern/Central QLD and northern NSW

A great new opportunity has arisen with a niche R&D based company where you can play a key role in northern livestock production and ecosystem improvement. The company is now seeking a Technical Sales Manager to continue to increase awareness of the significant benefits of the seed technology and its uptake.

We are keen to hear from you if you have a strong understanding of pasture agronomy, northern livestock systems and the pasture seed industry, supported by science-based tertiary education with either a plant or animal nutrition basis. With a focus on pasture-based livestock customers, this position will involve extension and sales activities, including demonstration sites, field days and on-farm liaison with producers (both private and corporate), as well as rural retailers and research and extension collaborators. You will build and maintain strong, effective relationships with both existing and potential clients to increase the market for this impressive technology.

There will be frequent, seasonal travel and there is some flexibility on a base location, preferably SW or Central Queensland. A part-time working arrangement may also be possible for the right person.

If you would like to know more about this exciting seed technology opportunity, please phone Mick Hay or Sharon Moloney on 07 3878 3411, or apply directly via www.rimfireresources.com.au
