

Stockperson/Stationhand

The Company

Our client is a world-leading agricultural technology company that is launching a new innovative product targeted into the beef and dairy industries worldwide. As the product has advanced through to the commercialization stage the on-farm testing programs are increasing, and there is a need for an experienced and organised stockperson/stationhand to manage the livestock on the company trial property in Queensland.

The Role

This role requires an experienced stockperson/stationhand to manage a small herd of beef cattle which are being used for some trial work on digital fencing technology. It involves monitoring of the cattle, ensuring that the cattle are well maintained and trial information is accurately recorded.

Duties

This role will be responsible for the following key work areas:

- Manage welfare of all livestock according to the Code of Practice
- Implement and manage animal husbandry programs
- Record accurate livestock information
- Maintain paddock security with reference to gates and fences
- Ensure strict adherence to workplace health and safety
- Maintenance & Infrastructure

Requirements to apply for this role

You will need to have the following attributes to apply for this role:

- Experience in cattle management practices
- Formal qualifications in agriculture would be preferred but not essential
- Experience of the northern beef industry will be valuable
- Preferably has grown up on a farm or managed and operated a beef farm in Australia or overseas
- We are looking for an energetic, self-motivated person who can work alone or in a team as required.
- Must possess the ability to take initiative and have a positive attitude to the work.

Location

The role is located at the company farm based near Ipswich in Queensland.

Remuneration

A good salary is on offer to attract the right person for this role. There is great opportunity for career advancement with this rapidly-growing agricultural technology company which is expanding both in Australia and overseas.
