

Stud Stock Coordinator

- Rare opportunity within the seed stock industry.
- Fast paced and exciting role.
- Focus on building strong relationships and brand awareness nationally!

Elite Livestock Auctions is part of Stocklive (a subsidiary of AAM Investment Group) an innovative online auction platform, providing services to the Australian agriculture industry. It is the most advanced, and easy to use, interactive online auction experience for the Australian livestock and related industries.

The key responsibilities of this role include:

- Promoting the business and increasing brand awareness across the industry.
- Be responsible for the management and business development of all stud stock sales.
- Oversee, conduct, and provide onsite support for all functions related to the stud stock sales and platform.
- Initiate business growth by actively pursuing commercial services within the livestock and property industry nationally.
- Build and maintain positive relationships with clients and key stakeholders, including employees, customers, livestock agents and contractors.

Ideally the successful candidate will have:

- Experience within the seed stock industry, livestock agency industry or agricultural sales.
- Sales and marketing, business development, and branding experience advantageous.
- Current drivers' licence, a vehicle will be provided as travel to sale locations is required.
- Excellent communication, time management and organisational skills.

Due to the nature of this role the work location can be flexible however it must be within a regional centre.

How to apply:

If this sounds like you, please apply today by providing a current CV to hr@aamig.com.au with the reference number SL001 in the subject heading, or for more information call 07 3153 8807.